now on what to expect is better than a word spoken too late. Captain Louis gave a talk to the enlisted men last night and the usual bull session followed. Thunderbolt Theater gave a good show entitled "Saratoga Trunk" with Gary Cooper and, despite the fact the show doesn't start until 1930 hours, at 1830 hours the theater was completely filled and standing room only was available. Air Corps Theater presented "Hollywood Canteen" and all in all it was a very good picture. The pups are just starting to open their eyes and in a couple of days should be getting their first look at the world. All the boys are sweating them out and every day brings many inquiries about them.

9 Stand down for the day. Rain and overcast skies kept the Squadron grounded for the day. A meeting was held in the officers' quarters which was attended by one officer and two enlisted men from each Squadron. The topic was Education and Information and an attempt will be made to interest all the men in a group discussion. The Air Corps Theater presented a British stage show and it was very good. The theater was filled to capacity and the performers went all out to give the boys a good time. It was a good show and well enjoyed by all.

10 Good flying weather today and the Squadron flew five missions. Lt. Held, one of the new pilots, did not return. After coming off the target, his plane had a hung bomb. He was last seen at 7,000 feet but just what happened is not definitely known. Lt. Held was an excellent pilot and was one of the few pilots who obtain a rating of superior from flying school. Thunderbolt Theater presented "None But The Lonely Heart" with Gary Grant. Strong rumors have been going around that we are to leave Italy and go to France. How these rumors get started is something we'll never know. It doesn't take long to make the rounds and soon everyone knows it. However, from all accounts the rumor is correct and before long we shall be moving.

11 Good flying weather again today and the Squadron flew four missions of twenty-four sorties. Lt. Hailes had a mission on a sugar refinery and several direct hits started large fires and smoke rose to about 2,000 feet. Thunderbolt Theater presented "My Pal, Wolf" strictly a class B picture. Air Corps Theater presented "Pin-Up Girl" with Betty Grable and, although there wasn't much plot to it, the Grable fans were well satisfied. The rumors we've been hearing about moving to France are true. Orders were issued in the morning to pack our bags and the names of those fortunate enough (?) to go on "A" party were announced. The officers' mess hall was closed, the Intelligence room was torn down and when, the usual thing happened. Yes you guessed it, the orders were cancelled for a couple of days. "A" party will leave sometime in the near future but when, no one knows. Many of the personnel have been seen going around studying a French dictionary and from all indications "les femmes" in France are in for some good "snow" jobs. The mess hall has been reopened and we are now sitting around sweating out the orders.

12 Bad weather kept the Squadron grounded for the day. Stand down was not called until 1500 hours when rain and overcast skies made it plain there would be no flying. Preparations still go on for our coming move and everyone is running around asking everyone questions which no one seems to be able to answer. The exact date of the departure of "A" party is still cloaked in mystery and no one knows for sure when they will leave. Most of the personnel have started their packing and are taking no chances on getting caught short. Some of the pilots are running around trying to find the correct approach for establishing friendly relations with the young French ladies. Rumor has it that our Group CO, Col. Bates, will depart for the States to attend Command Generals Staff School and that Col. Lee will take over the Group. Everything happens at once. A few days ago everyone would have sworn we would be in Pisa for the duration. However, in just two days everything has changed. As the French so aptly put it "C'est la Guerre."

13 Operations, which have been going full blast for the last few months slowed down today. The rumor that we were going to France proved to be much more than a rumor and according to the latest latrine rumor "A" party will leave tomorrow. Only two or three missions a day will be flown as operations will be leaving soon and they want to keep as many planes in good condition as possible for the trip to the new base. There is much speculation as to where we are going and what we are going to do and destinations run everywhere from France to China, India or Burma.

14 Well, today is the big day. "A" party will leave at 1300 hours sharp for the port at Leghorn. All the pilots baggage and most of the equipment has already been carried away. The officers' mess has been closed and "A" party's last meal in Italy will be at the enlisted men's area.

Our noon meal is over and Major McGoldrick is running around checking jeeps and trucks trying to see if they are numbered properly and that everyone is ready. The signal is given and the convoy starts. Our car, which is number 29, starts off with a bang and we're now on our first leg of the journey. We go for about two miles and for some reason we suddenly stop. Shortly a red jeep comes down the road, its siren screaming. What's happening? About five minutes later a large staff car with five stars goes by. It is General Marshall himself. Now the convoy gets ready to go. We're off again and on to Leghorn. Arriving at Leghorn we line up the convoy and await orders to load. At about four-thirty the first jeep rolls aboard. In no time at all the boat is loaded, the roll called and we are set to leave. The Naval Officers don't know where we are going, nor do we. One officer believes we're going to Cran on our first leg of the journey to the States. Very optimistic but we soon convince him that is strictly a rumor. At about nine o'clock in the evening we receive word that our destination is Marseilles. The trip will require about twenty-six hours and after that no one knows.

15 It is now six-thirty in the morning. The engines have started and the ship shudders as though reluctant to leave Leghorn. Why anyone should be reluctant to leave Italy I'll never know. Our journey will take twenty-six hours and barring bad weather we should be at our destination sometime before noon tomorrow. The day is beautiful and the sea very calm. Most of the men are sunning themselves or playing cards. Ahead of us are some LCI's and other LST's. This afternoon two P-47's buzzed the ship and gave the convoy the once over. Everyone is trying to figure out where we will go after we land but no one knows for sure. From all accounts a long trip awaits us and plenty of K rations have been provided.

- 16 It is now six-thirty in the morning. The ship passed a peaceful night. At about 4 AM something went wrong with the engine and we were forced to drop out of the convoy but after repairs had been made we managed to overtake it. Talk with one of the officers discloses the fact that we are ahead of schedule and will dock about eight-thirty. That means about twenty-six hours for the trip which wasn't bad at all.

Now it is eight-forty. We are slowly pulling into Marseilles Harbor. Sunken boats testify to the fact that not long ago the "Boche" were here. Now we have docked and soon the unloading begins. In a very short while all motor vehicles are ashore. Twenty men and Captain Calamai will go by train and take the equipment to our destination. The rest of us will proceed by vehicle. We start out but go about a quarter of a mile and stop. Immediately we are surrounded by French people of all sizes and shapes. They want cigarettes, gum, candy or anything, even K rations for which they offer two dollars a box. After about an hour we start again. No one seems to know just where we are going or just how we are going to get there. After winding around blocks and getting lost we finally make our way to a staging area. We now know that we are going to Tantonville, which is south of Nancy. We will leave at seven-thirty tomorrow morning. Now it is time for supper and after that bed. It is cold but not too cold.

- 17 It is now five-thirty AM. The camp is already active preparing for the start of the 447 mile journey. Now we find out that we are not going today after all. It seems that something is messed up someplace. Immediately everyone wants to go to Marseilles. Last night was really cold. Some of the hearty souls slept outside and this morning their blankets were covered with frost. Pancakes for breakfast and now some of us will go to Marseilles to change our money from Lires to Francs and probably other reasons, possibly "cherchez les femmes".

- 18 We are scheduled to leave this morning. Breakfast was at five-thirty and camp is being broke up. Vehicles are lined up and about seven o'clock the convoy starts. Southern France is very picturesque and shows little evidence of war. Scattered burned out M/T can be seen along the road testifying to the accuracy of some Allied aircraft. Some of the vehicles break down and are waiting for the maintenance truck to catch up. We stop for lunch at about twelve o'clock. The menu is K rations. It is cold and windy but not too bad. We go about 170 miles and stop for the night at St. Rambert.

- 19 Another early start. All packed and ready to leave at seven-fifteen. We plan to go as far as Dijon and stay there for the night. Through all the small towns the people smile and wave and the children give us the V for victory sign. The farmers bring us out wine wherever we stop and trade us fresh eggs. The countryside is beautiful and the homes are well kept and and modern. The weather is beautiful and everyone seems to be enjoying the ride very much. We have been having two hot meals a day and X rations for dinner. This part of France seems untouched by war.

20 After traveling all day we stop at Dijon for the night. We made pretty good time and tomorrow should be the last leg of the journey. Most of the men are enjoying the trip and from all accounts they like the country better than Italy already. The French girls seem much prettier and friendlier than the ones we left behind. A good supper is served and then most of the men hit the sack early. The vehicles are holding up good although most of them have seen a great deal of service.

21 Well this is it. The start of the last leg of the journey. Another early start. The bivouac area was really something out of this world. We spent the night in a heavily forested area with a big cement wall around it. The personnel working here tell us it was used by the Germans as a sort of prison. Mud is about three feet deep and there are no dry places to put our cots. No open fires are allowed and it looked for awhile as though we would freeze. However, some of the boys were lucky enough to get beds in French houses. The people are wonderful, giving us wine, a wonderful place to sleep and not accepting any money. Quite a change from the last country we were in. After a hearty breakfast we start out. From all accounts we should reach our destination about one o'clock in the afternoon. We are a few miles from our field and it has started to rain. The weather has been wonderful up to now. When we finally reach the field we are all in for a shock. Mud and more mud. The enlisted men have tents, the officers chateaus, such as they are. However, they are better than tents and with a little work can be fixed up. The pilots who came with "A" party look at the runway and wonder how they can ever get off. It slopes downhill at quite an angle.

22 Well today starts the progress on the field. Small huts are being built to house Operations and Intelligence. Curs is not yet completed but should be in a couple of days. The rest of the outfit is expected tomorrow and our first mission is scheduled for Sunday. Officers and men both are eating in the enlisted men's area and the food has really been good. New maps are being issued and the pilots will have to learn the country all over again.

23 Today the rest of the outfit is due to arrive. They are coming in three shifts about an hour apart. About two o'clock the planes from the 525th came over the field. With them are about six C-47's. About one hour later our planes arrive but no C-47's. The planes of the 527th Squadron have not arrived yet. We wait until dark but twenty planes of the 527th Squadron and some C-47's are missing. All the bed rolls of our pilots are on the C-47's and the pilots are wondering what they are going to sleep on.

24 The weather continued bad today but late it cleared up and the remainder of the outfit arrived. They spent the night at Lyon and from all accounts had quite a time. They tell us that Taylor and Welch are now Captains and that Kenoff, Kneack, and Gloeckler are now First Lieutenants. The 527th Sq. had a tough break and lost one of their pilots at Marseilles. Lt. Kerr landed and the plane that landed behind him crashed into him. Lt. Kerr was a fine fellow and will be missed.

- 25 Our first day of operations. The first mission is a sixteen plane show, a fighter sweep. The second mission is an armed reconnaissance. Our planes all came back. The other Squadrons are not so lucky. The 525th Sq. loses two men. Lt. Stuart bellies his plane in after being hit by flak and Lt. Mather parachuted out. The 527th Sq. lost two planes, with one pilot safe and the other pilot wounded. It's a busy day on the field. One B-24 and one B-17 land here, both having one engine shot out. A P-51 attempts to land on fire but crashes short of the runway. The pilot was dragged out and, although burned on the face and cut, he will live. Quick work by the fire truck saved his life. The pilots are finding out that it's a little tougher here than in Italy. Enemy aircraft are active and all the pilots fly with their head on a swivel.
- 26 One mission flown today. Bad weather and strong winds kept the Group grounded. The first flight sweated out the takeoff with a strong tail wind and a down hill runway. However, they all got off alright and back safely but reported the weather no good. The intelligence hut is finally finished and now we can start setting up maps, installing stoves, and any number of things necessary for operation. Prior to this time the briefing has been carried on at Group S-2.
- 27 Standby for the day. Bad weather kept all the missions on the ground. Back at Pisa, on a day like this, the Group would have been stood down but here Command says "standby until further notice" which probably means tomorrow morning. Show has been very good lately and there have been few complaints. Showers have been installed in the basement of the officers' quarters and both enlisted men and officers have taken advantage of them. There was a little excitement in the officers' quarters. A fire broke out at about six-thirty just as the Intelligence department, namely Capt. Louis and Lt. Wolf, were taking a bath. Smoke was so bad that the two officers could not get upstairs to get clothes. They were forced to run outside in undergarments and it was cold. The fire truck soon arrived and put out the blaze. A meeting of all officers was held and a dance was planned for Saturday night at the opening of the club. The pilots have been working hard on the club, painting and building and from all indications it should be a good job.
- 28 Bad weather in the morning kept the Squadron grounded but just after lunch the sky cleared and our first mission got off. Three missions of thirty-six sorties were flown in just the afternoon. Back at our base in Italy a thirty-six sortie day was considered good. However, as one man put it, "This is the big league and in time the Group will probably be flying up to 144 sorties a day. Awards in this theater are a little easier to get than than they were in Italy. Air Medals are given for each five sorties of a certain type. As yet there has been no provision made for a theater but rumor has it that we will have one. Things are beginning to shape up pretty good and before long we shall be as comfortable as we were before. Lt. Koftiezer was promoted to Captain and Lt. Heiles was awarded the DFC. Now that they are flying their missions over land most of the pilots have had their dinghys removed from their chutes.

(2) Nature of operations: Combat missions by flights of P-47 type aircraft, on dive bombing, strafing and escort, particularly in attacking enemy communications, and principally of dive bombing and strafing type.

(3) Number of missions and sorties for period:

- (a) Missions: 98.
- (b) Sorties : 778.

(4) Results of important missions:

(a) On 9 March 1945, Captain WALLACE A. HOFTIEZER led a twelve plane formation of fighter-bombers on an armed reconnaissance of Western Germany with a Pineapple priority. Enroute to the target the flight encountered a complete overcast which made the probability of a successful mission doubtful. On arriving over the target area the flight found the area to be covered with an overcast, at about 5,500 feet. The flight found a thirty-five car train loaded with motor transports and large guns which had been damaged but not destroyed. Immediately forming his flight for the attack Captain Hoftiezer led the flight in a perfect bombing run which enabled the P-47's to score direct hits on the train which destroyed at least fifteen rail cars and blew out a section of the track for 150 feet. By strafing and bombing the flight destroyed or damaged forty-two railroad cars, fifteen heavy guns, five light guns, and effected eight rail cuts. From all indications the enemy was attempting to remove these supplies but was prevented from doing so by the accurate bombing of our planes.

(b) On 11 March 1945, Lt. GEORGE E. WOOD led an eight-plane formation of P-47's on an armed reconnaissance of Western Germany. While proceeding to his assigned area the flight was called by Controller and ordered to bomb an ammunition dump close to the front lines. On arriving over the target area Lt. Wood set a perfect pattern of attack in his bomb run enabling his flight to place all bombs in the target area. Large explosions resulted with fire and smoke billowing up to 1,000 feet. The next day a message was sent by the 42nd Division confirming large fires and smoke as the result of this bombing.

(c) On 14 March 1945, Captain WALTER C. TAYLOR, JR., led an eleven plane formation of fighter-bombers in an armed reconnaissance of the area north of Karlsruhe, Germany. Good weather conditions seemed to assure the success of the flight. Controller assigned the flight a seventy car train loaded with motor transports and other supplies. By bombing and strafing the flight destroyed fifty-two motor transports, damaged ten railroad cars, and effected two rail cuts. Nine aircraft expended all their ammunition before breaking off the attack.

(d) On 16 March 1945, Captain WALLACE A. HOFTIEZER led an eight-plane formation of fighter-bombers in an armed reconnaissance of Western Germany. On arriving over the target area the flight observed a train with two locomotives moving north from Speyer. Immediately forming his flight for the attack Captain Hoftiezer led his flight in a perfect bombing run scoring direct hits resulting in the destruction of two locomotives and nineteen railroad cars. All told the flight destroyed or damaged two locomotives, thirty-four railroad cars, two buildings, and blew out a section of track for forty feet. This mission helped to cripple enemy communications in this area.

(e) On 18 March 1945, Captain WALTER C. RYAN, Jr. led an eight plane formation on an armed reconnaissance of Western Germany. With a close support mission assigned by Controller as the primary target. Working in close conjunction with Controller, the flight bombed and strafed motor transports and armored vehicles of German troops attempting to move out of the Front Line area. So accurate was the bombing and strafing of the flight that the amazing total destroyed or damaged was forty-two motor transports, two light tanks, and three German jeeps.

(f) On 20 March 1945, Captain SUI J. SETENCICH led an eight plane formation of fighter-bombers on an armed reconnaissance of the battle area with a close support mission to be assigned as the primary target. On arriving at the target area the flight was assigned the task of conducting a reconnaissance from Neustadt to Mannheim. They were unable to find any movement. Controller then called them and told them there was motor transport movement southwest of Kaiserslautern. On arriving at the area the flight could see our own troops advancing southeast out of the town and the Germans moving east about four or five miles away from our troops. Immediately attacking, the flight bombed and strafed the fleeing enemy destroying or damaging forty-seven enemy motor transports, seven horse drawn vehicles and killing a great many enemy personnel.

(g) On 21 March 1945, Captain SUI J. SETENCICH led a nine plane formation of fighter-bombers in an attack upon fortified positions on the northwest side of hill near the town of Fishbeck. Our troops were being held up by these positions. Good weather made the probability of the mission being successful, good. On arriving at the target area, Captain Setencich immediately formed his flight for the attack and led them in a perfect bombing run, putting all the bombs in the target area. Dugout positions and entrenchments were well covered and four strafing passes were made. At the time of the attack friendly elements were only 1,000 yards south of the target. The next day a letter of commendation was received from the 42nd Infantry Division. The letter read in part: "Seasoned veterans state air attack was best close support ever witnessed. Grateful is a weak word for Division's feelings".

h. Commanding Officer and important missions:

- (1) Commanding Officer: Major RICHARD (RLI) TAYLOR.
- (2) Important missions:

(a) On 14 March 1945, Captain WALLACE A. HOFFMEYER, led a twelve plane formation of fighter-bombers on an armed reconnaissance of Western Germany. Controller gave the flight the target of a runway at Gr. Sachsenheim. Major TAYLOR flew as leader of Blue flight. On arriving over the target area, Captain Hoffmeyer led his flight in a bomb run scoring direct hits on the center of the runway and cratering it. Major Taylor's bombs hit the woods and started a large fire. A reconnaissance plane in the area said that a fuel dump had been hit. The fire at the target was very intense and one plane was lost. Missions flown on the following day reported the runway well cratered and unserviceable.

1. Losses in action:

(1) ALLAN H. DeBERRY, O-2059236, 2nd Lt., Air Corps, Pilot, failed to return from mission. Plane was seen to crash at R-1669 near Annweiler, Germany. MIA. 14 March 1945.

(2) JOHN H. KUPPERS, O-823093, 1st Lt., Air Corps, Pilot, failed to return from mission. Last seen at R-9542, just north of Gr. Sachsenheim, Germany, at an altitude of 1,000 feet. MIA 14 March 1945.

(3) EDWARD C. MAGARIAN, O-708723, 2nd Lt., Air Corps, Pilot, failed to return from mission. Crashed at Q-926321, near Uhrwiller, France, and he was later found by the Chaplain still in his plane. KIA. 15 March 1945.

(4) BUSHNELL N. WELCH, O-759135, Captain, Air Corps, Pilot, failed to return from mission. Plane crashed at R-8134, just west of Wiernsheim, Germany. MIA. 19 March 1945.

(5) WALTER C. TAYLOR, JR., O-821561, Captain, Air Corps, Pilot, failed to return from mission. Plane crashed and burned at R-309662, near Landau, Germany. Captain Taylor's grave was later found by the Chaplain in a civilian graveyard. KIA. 20 March 1945.

WAR DIARY

- 1 The start of another month and business goes on with the "Boche" as usual. How much longer can Germany hold out? That is something we would all like to know. Pilots returning from missions all during the day report flight after flight of Allied aircraft bombing Germany. They say they have never seen so many aircraft in the air at one time. The news sounds good and at last reports the city of Cologne was under artillery fire. The Squadron flew three missions of thirty sorties with no unusual incidents occurring. The Intelligence hut is now fixed up fairly well, complete with radio and gas stove. The men and officers both are sweating out mail and hoping that it will soon catch up with us. The weather in this part of France is very unpredictable. One moment the sun is out and a clear sky and the next few minutes finds a complete overcast and rain pouring down. The runway slopes down hill and at times has a strong wind blowing down it but the planes seem to get off alright. Some of the pilots have bicycles now and can be seen riding around taking their daily exercise. The Officers' Club in the 526th Officers' Quarters is coming along nicely. Some of the pilots have built chairs and couches and our versatile Engineering Officer has built a stove. A dance is scheduled for Sunday night and the only obstacle remaining is women and from all accounts they shouldn't be too hard to get. Most of the fellows can be seen walking around talking to themselves and carrying a French dictionary. From the looks of things some "femmes" are in for a time. Wood is very hard to find and even cigarettes, candy and soap will not serve as trading articles for it although for feminine companionship they serve very well, so I'm told.

- 2 Several of the fellows who have managed to visit the neighboring town, Nancy, report many interesting things. As every place we have been before has had its PBS, MBS, IBS, etc so we find one here. It is called OAS. What that means I have not been able to find out. However the other day, having occasion to go there myself, I found that all I had heard was true. I had no sooner stopped the jeep, locked it and started to walk away when it was surrounded by two busy MP's. One of them tested the security of the lock by pulling on it while the other searched the jeep thoroughly. On inquiring I was told that if the jeep was not securely locked it would be picked up and I would never see it again. For my indiscretion of questioning the powers that be I was told that I was supposed to wear a tie and carry a sidearm. After the encounter I got back in the jeep and drove off. After parking again, as before, it wasn't two minutes until there were two MP's around the jeep again. Never have I seen so many at one place in such a short time. The 525th Squadron ran into a little bad luck last night. Two officers turned over a jeep, killing one of them and seriously injuring the other.

- 3 The Squadron flew three missions of thirty-seven sorties today. Heavy troop and motor transport movement was reported but bad weather prevented the Squadron from getting into where they were. Most of the officers have been working hard on the Officers' Club, building and painting in preparation for the coming Sunday night dance and they have done a good job of it. A Group Mess has been put in operation for the officers and a bevy of French girls are waiting on table. We now have a theater and the picture last night was "Our Hearts Were Young And Gay".

- 4 Bad flying weather kept the Squadron on the ground most of the day. One flight that did get off was recalled by "baggage" and had to jettison their bombs. One pilot dropped his armed and the resulting explosions shook the building although he dropped them a good five miles away. The Officers' Club sponsored its first party last night and a good time was had by all. The liquor ration arrived just before the party started and in a short while most everyone at the party felt no pain. The nurses at the party seemed to have a good time and are looking forward to the many more dances planned for the future. Captain Setencich returned from his thirty-day furlough to the States and reports everything back there alright. He flew both ways and says he is glad to be back. I wonder (?).
- 5 One mission flown yesterday but adverse weather conditions forced the flight to call for an "eggbasket" and drop their bombs through an overcast. The officers' mess will be closed for a few days for reorganization and the officers will, once again, buck the chow-line at the enlisted men's mess. Plans for a bigger and better dance are now in the making after all the favorable comment received on the last one. Thirty-two clerks and cooks took a physical examination in compliance with orders to transfer non-essentials from the Air Corps to the Infantry. Morale among those effected is at a complete new low ebb.
- 6 Standby for the day. Rain, snow and sleet kept operations at a minimum. The food at the enlisted men's mess is very good and frankly, is better than what we were getting at the officers' mess. As is the case every time we move, the enlisted men have spent considerable time and hard work in making their tents comfortable. Most of the tents have wooden floors and doors and are equipped with one and in some cases two stoves. The area as a whole presents a much cozier place to live than when we first arrived. Outside the tents however, the mud varies in depth from two to six inches making it next to impossible to keep the living quarters clean.
- 7 Bad weather again today. Rain and overcast skies kept the entire Group grounded. Since our arrival in France we have flown few missions due to adverse weather conditions. Natives tell us that last month was the last winter month and that during March we can expect a good deal of rain and so far they have been right. The Group bus, which runs to Nancy, still gets a big play and is usually crowded. The Red Cross Club and the Cafe Lorraine are about the only things of interest that Nancy has to offer. Usually they are both so crowded that unless you get there early it's impossible to get a table.
- 8 Standby for the third straight day. Pilots are beginning to complain that they haven't flown for so long they have almost forgotten how. The food is still very good and most of the officers insist they would rather stand in a chowline and eat at the enlisted men's mess than at the officers' mess.

WAR DIARY

Beacoup mail came in and almost everyone had at least one letter. The enlisted men have a club now and officers will be elected tonight. The local population seems very friendly and when the boys attempt to buy eggs, most of the people will insist they have a drink. They have a drink they give you in a small glass and it looks like water. I believe that 100 octane gasoline would not be as strong. After one drink you can see why you get in a small glass. However, the people are friendlier and much cleaner than those we left behind us in Italy.

9 Good flying weather over the field enabled the Squadron to fly three missions of twenty-four sorties. Captain Taylor, on a weather reconnaissance, caught a thirty-five car train loaded with motor transports and guns. He strafed it thoroughly and destroyed the motor transports but having no bombs could not destroy the railroad cars. Another flight led by Captain Hoftiezer and loaded with bombs went after it again. Captain Taylor's flight received no flak from the target and must have caught them unprepared. However, in the afternoon Captain Hoftiezer's flight caught plenty of flak damaging three planes and forcing Captain Welch to bail out. He came down on our side, was picked up by Allied troops, and will return to the Squadron tomorrow. The flight scored direct hits destroying fifteen loaded cars and cutting the rail line for a distance of 150 feet. The theater in town presented "Marriage By Mistake" and from all accounts it was a pretty good show.

10 Bad flying weather all day kept the Squadron on the ground. Captain Welch returned about noon today. He was picked up by a French Division. He was unhurt and had quite a story to tell. It seems the first time he pulled the ripcord nothing happened. Right then and there he started to sweat and who can blame him. However, on the second try the chute cracked open and he landed without a jar. Steak for dinner today and, as usual, the cooks had done a good job of preparing it.

11 Lately the policy of the Command seems to be the old Army game of hurry up and wait. In spite of bad weather the squadrons arise early, about five o'clock, then come down to an early breakfast, brief, and sit around for about five hours. The weather is bad here, rather tempermental with a break in the clouds one moment and a complete overcast the next. Two eight-plane missions were flown yesterday. The 527th Squadron had a little bad luck and lost two planes. One pilot has been accounted for but the other is still missing. Lt. Col. Lee flew a mission yesterday and came back with four flak holes in his plane. No movie tonight.

12 Bad weather again today. Our Squadron flew a weather reconnaissance mission and reported the front line socked in. Captain Hill and Lt. Taylor of the 527th Squadron flew a mission and both are missing. No word has been received of them and none of the controllers had contact with them. They are both experienced pilots and we are all hoping they will show up. The theater in town presented "The Fallen Sparrow" with John Garfield and it turned out to be a very good mystery picture. Fried chicken for dinner, which was very good. Lt. Magarian had quite an experience last night.

WAR DIARY

About 1930 hours he had occasion to go out to Major Taylor's trailer. As he was crossing the road he heard a noise which sounded like a bullet being put into the chamber of a gun. He ran and hid behind the trailer. The unseen assailant fired one shot at him and then took off. Who fired the shot is not known and probably never will be. In several instances, officers in search of eggs at nearby towns, have seen German PW's at work. One of the officers returning from Nancy saw a German soldier walking along the road, dressed in complete uniform and no guard anywhere around. What to do in cases like that is something we would like to have clarified.

- 13 Fog and overcast kept the Squadron grounded until noon and then two missions of nineteen sorties were flown. Quite a bit of excitement prevailed when a pilot of the 527th Squadron could only get one wheel down. He flew around for some time and then went up to 7,000 feet and bailed out. He was stuck and finally cleared the plane at 4,000 feet. The chute opened successfully and he landed uninjured except for a small cut over one eye. The search still goes for the two pilots from the 527th Squadron and a plane is believed to have been located Northeast of Strasbourg. Identification of the pilot had not been made but the CO is on his way up there to try and identify the plane.
- 14 Good flying weather in the afternoon enabled the Squadron to fly three missions. Today we ran into our first bad luck since coming to France. Lt. DeBerry and Lt. Kuppers did not return from their mission. Lt. DeBerry's plane was observed to crash and explode and as no parachute was seen it is pretty certain he did not get out. Lt. Kuppers was last sighted flying at about 1,000 feet and was not seen again. Captain Taylor, flying the last mission of the day, destroyed twenty-six motor transports and damaged twenty-six others.
- 15 Well the Seventh Army push has started. Starting early in the morning and continuing until dark our planes flew close support. One town our planes bombed was captured about one hour after we bombed it. The Third Army is still moving and at last reports had successfully crossed the Moselle River. Lt. Magarian was lost today when his plane crashed and exploded on a strafing pass. At last reports the Seventh Army had gained about three miles on an average.
- 16 The big push continues. From all reports the Seventh Army did not do as well as expected but gained about three miles along the entire front. However, it takes time to build up strength to make a break-through and it is expected that the intensity of the drive will increase. Patton's Third Army moved so fast that contact was lost with them. Captain Dixon, our ALO, had a busy time of it running from squadron to squadron changing the bomb line. The Squadron flew mostly armed reconnaissance missions. Lts. Luth and Wagler returned from Cannes where they say they had a good time.
- 17 Third Army continued to make gains today. Seventh Army was moving slowly.

WAR DIARY

The town of Bitche, a German stronghold, was captured, lost and has been recaptured. Bad weather along the front prevented the Group from giving very much close support to the Seventh Army. A few missions were flown and one mission, led by Captain Hoftiezer, caught a troop train and fire bombed it. They damaged five locomotives and about 15-20 passenger cars.

- 18 Today was one of the biggest days this Squadron has seen since coming overseas. Eight missions of 61 sorties were flown and in almost every instance, a good target was found. The Germans appear to be trying to move some of their supplies and men out. The bomb line has been in a constant state of change all day and extreme caution was used on briefing the pilots where and where not to bomb. A great many locomotives, tanks and motor transports were destroyed today. Our last mission was a patrol watching for enemy aircraft and the flight did not return until dark but everyone landed safely.
- 19 Another big day. The push still goes on and our pilots are flying two missions a day. The Germans seem to be trying to pull out to the East of the Rhine. Captain Welch did not return. His plane was found crashed but whether he bailed out or not is not known. He will be sorely missed. Having over 185 combat missions to his credit he had planned on flying 200 or more missions. "A Tree Grows In Brooklyn" was presented at the theater.
- 20 Another day of fast moving bomblines changes. On our first mission the Squadron had some real bad luck. Captain Walter C. Taylor who had flown 127 missions and who planned on finishing up his tour today did not return. From the reports received from the other pilots in his flight, he went too low, caught his own bomb blast and crashed. He will be sorely missed. Captain Taylor was one of the outstanding pilots in the Group and an excellent flight leader. He holds the Distinguished Flying Cross with an Oak-leaf Cluster and the Air Medal with six Oak-Leaf Clusters. His loss was a real blow to the Squadron and he will be a hard man to replace.
- 21 On arriving at work this morning we noticed another big bomblines change. A talk with the ALO Officer discloses the fact that a great many towns have been captured and much more progress made. Germans are reported coming in by the hundreds, filling the PW stockades to overflowing. The Third and Seventh Armies have joined. The news really looks good and before long all the troops should be along the Rhine River. Then probably a crossing will be made and who knows where they'll be stopped. One flight on returning from a mission reported that there were so many planes bombing fleeing motor transports and enemy personnel that the flight only had time to bomb and could make no strafing passes. The enemy waved white flags at our planes and about five or six miles away our tanks could be seen coming hell bent for election down the road.
- 22 Another busy day today. Returning pilots report only scattered movement. Our ALO Officer tells us that on many occasions the Germans west of the Rhine are surrendering in large numbers and in some instances are just waiting for someone to capture them. Lts. Lovett, O'Neill, Camp and Delo were promoted to 1st Lts. A serious accident occurred on a taxi strip today when one of the enlisted men walked into a propeller of a plane which severed his arm above the elbow. Sgt. Robert A. Harmon of this Squadron, was walking up a taxi strip watching a plane taxiing on another strip and failed to hear one approaching from the rear. The plane taxied into Sgt. Harmon, the propeller severing his arm just below the shoulder and throwing the severed portion two or three hundred feet from the plane. Sgt. Harmon was immediately given first aid and rushed to the nearest hospital. Reports several hours later said that he was doing quite well. The taxi strips are quite narrow and the P-47 in taxiing position affords the pilot very meager visibility. It has been necessary a number of times to have one of the ground crew ride the wing of the plane until it is safely on the runway. At about dusk this evening Lt. Genz, a new pilot flying transition with several other new pilots, got caught in the prop wash of another plane while coming in for a landing. Efforts of the pilot to avoid the prop wash failed and, due to insufficient air speed, the plane dropped to the ground short of the steel mat runway, blowing one tire, bouncing onto the runway where it stopped so suddenly that the plane was thrown on its nose, and then settling gently back to its normal position. The pilot was uninjured. About twenty minutes later a flight came back from a mission over Germany and the flight leader, Captain Setencich, gave an excellent demonstration of how to bring a plane in---very hot. Plenty of excitement on these makeshift airfields.

- 23 Stand down for the day for maintenance. One of the most important things that happened today is the bomblines crossing the Rhine River below Maintz. This indicates that Patton has reached and possibly has patrols on the other side. Prisoners are being taken by the hundreds. Motor transport destruction by our planes has reached a new high. According to latest reports the Rhine has been reached by our troops as far South as Speyer which has been captured.
- 24 Another momentous day of changing bomblines. Perhaps the most important thing that has happened was the landing of airborne troops somewhere north of the Ruhr in support of British troops. The Third Army crossed the Rhine and at last reports General Patton was still moving. As the enlisted men put it, he was blowing and going. Returning from a late mission last night, Lt. Jones found that his plane was so badly shot up it would be necessary to crash land it. He did a beautiful job of it, although he didn't have any air speed indicator and his plane had been on fire.
- 25 The news along the entire front still continues good. Patton seems to be enlarging his bridgehead and, although not much news is coming through, continuous bomblines changes indicate he's on the move. All organized resistance west of the Rhine has ceased and the few Germans that remain to be captured are somewhere in the area near Karlsruhe. Some of the boys give the war two months and some six months but it can't possibly end soon enough to suit most of us. The policy on rotation has been changed and pilots who reach 100 missions are apt to find themselves flying a few more as the wheels in higher Command believe the war is in the final phase and there will not be any need to send pilots home. Some of the boys have visited Paris and from all accounts, Gay Paree is all that it is claimed to be. They claim the women ask you, and unless you say no, brother you've had it.

26 Patton still seems to be moving fast and at last reports he had crossed the River Main. Speculation as to the duration of the war runs anywhere from two weeks to six months. A news broadcast from the States says the war will end in two weeks. I wonder where they get their ideas. A good deal of the ground where we lost some of our boys has been captured and the Chaplin is going to make a trip and find out if possible, whether they are alive or not. Captain Taylor, and Lts. DeBerry and Magarian were all lost on the West side of the Rhine and we are all hoping some indication of their fate can be found. An unknown pilots grave was found recently and all signs point to it being that of Lt. Stewart of the 525th Sq. who crashed on the same date and the same time that the marker of the grave indicates.

27 Poor weather today. Three squadrons attempted to get through the overcast but had to turn back. Stand down was finally called at four o'clock in the afternoon. RA supplies today and one bottle of beer was given each man. That is just about enough to get a taste in your mouth. If the line keeps changing as fast as it has been we're going to be due for a move shortly. A close support mission now requires a flight of 150 miles before even crossing the bombline and that uses a lot of gas which could be used to better advantage.

28 Some of the fellows who went to the front lines with the Chaplin have returned in style. The 525th Sq. came back with a number of captured cars which somehow or other they managed to pick up. They claim there are a great many cars up there that can be picked up. Today about five officers from our Sq. left for the front to see what they can do about picking up some cars. Lt. Magarian, who crashed on a strafing run near Landau, was also found. His plane had exploded and burned but identification was made by checking serial numbers of the guns.

29 Bad flying weather kept the Group grounded. Stand down was finally called about 1500 hours. Captain Taylor, who crashed on a strafing pass a short time ago and was carried as missing in action was found. He had been buried in a civilian cemetery by the Germans. Lt. Stewart's grave was also found but as yet there has been no word of Lt. DeBerry or Lt. Koppers. Lt. Hailes, our operation officer, promoted to Captain.

30 Standby again today. Rain turning almost to snow kept all flying to a minimum. One week all the pilots are flying two missions a day and bitching; but now they are bitching because there isn't any flying. That's life for you.

31 Good flying weather prevailed today and the squadron flew several missions of 56 sorties. Good results were obtained and the pilots seemed glad to get back in the air after a lay off of a few days. The "scrounging" party returned and
